

Your rights under the CCPA as amended by the California Privacy Rights Act of 2020

If you are a California resident, you have the following rights under the CCPA:

1. The right to know what personal information we have collected about you, including:
 - a. The categories of personal information we have collected;
 - b. The categories of sources from which the personal information is collected;
 - c. The business or commercial purpose(s) for collecting, selling, or sharing your personal information; and
 - d. The specific pieces of your personal information we have collected;
2. The right to delete personal information we have collected from you, subject to some exceptions;
3. The right to correct your inaccurate personal information we maintain;
4. If we sell or share your personal information with third parties, the right to opt-out of the sale or sharing by the Credit Union;
5. If we use or disclose your sensitive personal information other than for reasons set forth in Section 7027(m) of the Regulations implementing the CCPA, you have the right to limit our use or disclosure of your sensitive personal information; and
6. The right not to receive discriminatory treatment by the Credit Union for the exercise of privacy rights conferred by the CCPA, including an employee's, applicant's, or independent contractor's right not to be retaliated against for the exercise of their CCPA rights.

However, as a financial institution, the CCPA is not applicable if the information we collect, share, or sell is subject to the federal Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act and its implementing regulations and/or the California Financial Information Privacy Act. Generally speaking, this means we are not required to comply with the CCPA if the information we collected is information that:

- a. You provided to us to obtain a product or service from the Credit Union;
- b. We collected about you resulting from any transaction involving a product or service between you and the Credit Union; or
- c. The Credit Union otherwise obtained about you in connection with providing a product or service to you.

Nevertheless, the Credit Union takes the privacy and security of your personal information seriously and, even though the CCPA may not be applicable to us in most cases, we will honor your rights described in this CCPA Privacy Policy except in the event of a conflict with applicable state or federal law, another exception to the CCPA applies, or complying with your request would be impossible or require disproportionate effort.

We obtain the categories of personal information listed in the Table above from the following categories of sources:

- Directly from you. For example, forms you complete, applying for membership, perform transactions, or purchasing products or services.
- Indirectly from you. For example, from observing your actions on our website and mobile applications, such as when and how you connect to our website, your device and/or browser may disclose information such as device type, operating system, browser type, IP address, internet service provider, webpages visited, date and time of your visit, links and pages you view, other standard server log information, and we may also collect your mobile device's GPS signal about nearby Wi-Fi access and cell towers), when you use your debit or credit card, make deposits or withdrawals to/from your accounts, or when you pay your bills.

- From third parties. We also receive information from third parties, such as credit reporting agencies, government agencies, law enforcement authorities, or service providers.

Specific business or commercial purposes for which we collect personal information about California consumers

- To fulfill or meet the reason the consumer provided the information. For example, if you share your name and contact information with us to request a rate quote, to ask a question about our products or services, or to process a transaction, we will use that information to respond to your request or question and to process your transactions, accordingly. We may also save your information to facilitate new transactions in the future. We also use your information for customer service and collections purposes and for ongoing account maintenance, such as providing account statements, access to online banking, and providing account notifications.
- To provide, support, and develop our website, products, and services.
- To offer products and/or services we believe may be of interest.
- To create, maintain, customize, and secure accounts with us.
- To process requests, purchases, transactions, and payments, and to prevent transactional fraud.
- To provide support and to respond to inquiries, including to investigate and address concerns and monitor and improve our responses.

We will not collect additional categories of personal information or use the personal information we collected for materially different, unrelated, or incompatible purposes without providing notice.

Categories of personal information, if any, we have sold or shared to third parties

Please note the CCPA defines "selling" and "sharing" personal information differently than you might expect. Under the CCPA, (1) "selling" and "sharing" personal information means selling or sharing to a "third party" and (2) the term "third party" does not include our service providers or contractors when we have a written contract in place with such service providers or contractors that meet certain requirements set forth in the CCPA. This means our service providers and contractors are not considered "third parties" for CCPA purposes.

With the above in mind, we have not sold or shared consumers' personal information with third parties (other than our service providers or contractors) in the previous 12 months.

Categories of personal information, if any, we have disclosed for business purposes to third parties

We have not disclosed consumer's personal information to third parties (other than our service providers or contractors) for business purposes in the preceding 12 months.

Additional required disclosures we are required to make available under the CCPA

We have no actual knowledge we sell or share the personal information of consumers under 16 years of age. The Credit Union does not use or disclose sensitive personal information for purposes other than specified in Section 7027(m) of the CCPA Regulations.

Role of cookies and other online tracking technologies

We, or our service providers, and other companies we work with may deploy and use cookies, web beacons, local shared objects and other tracking for various purposes, such as fraud prevention and to promote products and services to you. Some of these tracking tools may detect characteristics or settings of the specific device you use to access our online services.

"Cookies" are pieces of information stored directly on your computer, smartphone, or other internet access device. Browser cookies are assigned by a web server to the browser on your device. When you return to a website you have visited before, your browser gives this data back to the server. When you visit our website, we may use cookies and information gathered through your use to personalize your experience based on the products, services, and other interactions you have with us. Information gathered through the use of cookies may be used to make offers via online ads, email, U.S. mail, or phone, subject to the privacy preferences you have on file with Rize Federal Credit Union. Cookies we use do not contain or capture unencrypted personal information.

The browsers of most computers, smartphones, and other internet access devices are set up to accept cookies. You can refuse to accept these cookies through your browser settings. You will need to manage your cookie settings for each device and browser you use. If you choose to reject cookies, you may not be able to use the full functionality of our website. For example, if we are not able to recognize your device, you will need to answer a challenge question each time you log on. You also may not receive customized advertising or other offers that may be relevant to your interests.

Clear GIFs, pixel tags, or web beacons – which are typically one-pixel, transparent images located on a webpage or in an email – or similar technologies may be used on our sites and some of our digital communications. They may also be used when served advertisements, or you otherwise interact with advertisements outside of our online services. These are principally used to help recognize users, assess traffic patterns, and measure site or campaign engagement.

“First-party” cookies are stored by the domain (website) you visit directly. They allow the website’s owner to collect analytic data, remember language settings, and perform functions that help provide a good experience. “Third-party” cookies are created by domains other than the one you visit directly, hence the name third-party. They may be used for cross-site tracking, retargeting, and ad-serving. Cookies fall into the following general categories:

- Essential Cookies: These cookies are technically necessary to provide website functionality. They are a website’s basic form of memory, used to store the preferences selected by a user. As the name implies, they are essential to a website’s functionality and cannot be disabled by users. For example, an essential cookie may be used to prevent users from having to log in each time they visit a new page in the same session.
- Performance and Function Cookies: These cookies are used to enhance performance and functionality of a website, but are not essential. Without these cookies, certain functions may become unavailable.
- Analytics and Customization Cookies: Analytics and customization cookies track user activity, so website owners can better understand how their site is being accessed and used.
- Advertising Cookies: Advertising cookies are used to customize a user’s experience on a Website. Using the data collected from these cookies, websites can prevent the same ad from being repeated, remember user ad preferences, and tailor ads based on a user’s online activities.

Please also see the sections below for additional information.

If you wish to submit a request to know the information we have collected about you, you may request we tell you:

- The personal information we have collected;
- The sources from which the personal information is collected;
- The business or commercial purpose(s) for collecting, selling, or sharing your personal information;
- If applicable, the third parties with whom we share personal information;
- If applicable, the personal information we sold, and identified, the third parties to whom we sold the personal information; and
- If applicable, the personal information we disclosed for a business purpose, and identified, the third parties to whom was it disclosed.

In response to a request, we will provide all the personal information we have collected and maintain about you within the 12-month period preceding our receipt of the request, unless doing so proves impossible or would involve disproportionate effort, or you request data for a specific time period. The information we provide will include any personal information our service providers or contractors collected pursuant to their written contract with us. If we claim providing personal information beyond the 12-month period would be impossible or would involve disproportionate effort, we will provide a detailed explanation that includes enough facts to give you a meaningful understanding as to why we cannot provide personal information beyond the 12-month period. We will not simply state it is impossible or would require disproportionate effort.

If you want us to disclose the specific pieces of personal information we have collected about you, you must specify this information at the time you submit your request. For requests seeking the disclosure of specific pieces of information, if we cannot verify your identity, we will not disclose any specific pieces of personal information and we will inform you we cannot verify your identity. If the request is denied in whole or in part, we will evaluate your request as if it is seeking the disclosure of categories of personal information.

For requests seeking the disclosure of personal information about you, if we cannot verify your identity, we may deny the request and will inform you. If the request is denied in whole or in part, we will provide or direct you to our general business Information Practices regarding the collection, maintenance, and sale of personal information set forth in our privacy policy.

We are not required to search for personal information if all of the following conditions are met:

1. We do not maintain the personal information in a searchable or reasonably accessible format;
2. We maintain the personal information solely for legal or compliance purposes;
3. We do not sell the personal information and do not use it for commercial purpose; and
4. We describe the categories of records that may contain personal information we did not search because we met the conditions above.

We will not disclose in response to a request to know your Social Security number, driver’s license number or other government-issued identification number, financial account number, any health insurance or medical identification number, an account password, security questions and answers, or unique biometric data generated from measurements or technical analysis of human characteristics. We will, however, inform you with sufficient particularity we have collected the type of information. For example, we may respond we collect “unique biometric data including a fingerprint scan” without disclosing the actual fingerprint scan data.

If we deny your verified request to know specific pieces of personal information, in whole or in part, because of a conflict with federal or state law, or an exception to the CCPA, we will inform you and explain the basis for the denial, unless prohibited from doing so by law. If the request is denied only in part, we will disclose the other information you requested.

We will use reasonable security measures when transmitting personal information to you.

Requests to delete:

In addition to the general information, you must provide in connection with your request (see “For all requests, you must provide the following information” above), to request information be deleted, you must identify the information you would like us to delete.

If we cannot verify your identity, we may deny the request to delete. We will inform you that your identity cannot be verified.

As set forth in the CCPA regulations, we will comply with a verified request to delete your personal information by:

1. Permanently and completely erasing the personal information from our existing systems with the exception of archived or back-up systems, deidentifying the personal information, or aggregating your information;
2. Notifying our service providers or contractors to delete your personal information from their records which they collected pursuant to their written contract with us, or if enabled to do so by the service provider or contractor, we will delete the personal information the service provider or contractor collected pursuant to their written contract with us; and
3. Notifying all third parties to whom we have sold or shared the personal information, if applicable, to delete your personal information unless this proves impossible or involves disproportionate effort.

If we, a service provider, or a contractor stores any personal information on archive or backup systems, we/it may delay compliance with your request to delete, with respect to data stored on the archived or backup system, until the archive or backup system relating to that data is restored to an active system or is next accessed or used for a sale, disclosure, or commercial purpose.

In responding to a request to delete, we will inform you whether or not we have complied with your request. We will maintain a record of the request as required by regulation. We, our service providers, contractors, or third parties may retain a record of the request for the purpose of ensuring your personal information remains deleted.

In cases where we deny your request to delete in whole or in part, we will do all of the following:

1. Provide you with a detailed explanation of the basis for the denial, including any conflict with federal or state law, or exception to the CCPA, or factual basis for contending compliance would be impossible or involve disproportionate effort, unless prohibited from doing so by law;
2. Delete your personal information that is not subject to the exception;
3. Not use your personal information retained for any other purpose than provided for by that exception; and
4. Instruct our service providers and contractors to delete your personal information that is not subject to the exception and to not use your personal information retained for any purpose other than the purpose provided for by that exception.

In responding to a request to delete, we may present you with the choice to delete select portions of your personal information as long as a single option to delete all personal information is also offered and more prominently presented than the other choices. If we provide California consumers the ability to delete select categories of personal information (e.g., purchase history, browsing history, voice recordings) in other contexts, however, we must inform you of your ability to do so and direct you on how to do so.

Requests to correct:

In addition to general information you must provide in connection with your request (see “For all requests, you must provide the following information” above), to request information be corrected, you must identify the information you would like us to correct.

If we cannot verify your identity, we may deny the request to correct. We will inform you your identity cannot be verified.

In determining the accuracy the personal information is the subject of your request to correct, we will consider the totality of the circumstances relating to the contested personal information. We may deny your request to correct if we determine the contested personal information is more likely than not accurate based on the totality of the circumstances. Considering the totality of the circumstances includes, but is not limited to, considering:

1. The nature of the personal information (e.g., whether it is objective, subjective, unstructured, sensitive, etc.);
2. How we obtained the contested information; and
3. Documentation relating to the accuracy of the information, whether provided by you, available to us, or obtained via another source.

If we are not the source of the personal information and we have no documentation to support the accuracy, your assertion of inaccuracy may be sufficient to establish the personal information is inaccurate.

If we comply with your request to correct, we will correct the personal information at issue on our existing systems and implement measures to ensure the information remains corrected. We will also instruct our service providers and contractors that maintain the personal information at issue pursuant to their written contract with us to make the necessary corrections in their respective systems. Service providers and contractors must comply with our instructions to correct the personal information or enable us to make the corrections and must also ensure the information remains corrected.

If we, a service provider, or a contractor store any personal information that is the subject of your request to correct on archived or backup systems, we/it may delay compliance with your request to correct, with respect to data stored on the archived or backup system, until the archive or backup system relating to that data is restored to an active system or is next accessed or used.

We will accept, review, and consider any documentation you provide in connection with your request to correct whether provided voluntarily or as required by us. You should make a good-faith effort to provide us with all necessary information available at the time of your request.

We may require you to provide documentation if necessary to rebut our own documentation that the personal information is accurate. In determining the necessity of the documentation requested, we will consider the following:

1. The nature of the personal information at issue (e.g., whether it is objective, subjective, unstructured, sensitive, etc.).
2. The nature of the documentation upon which we consider the personal information to be accurate (e.g., whether the documentation is from a trusted source, whether the documentation is verifiable, etc.)
3. The purpose for which we collect, maintain, or use the personal information. For example, if the personal information is essential to the functioning of the Credit Union, we may require more documentation.
4. The impact on you. For example, if the personal information has a negative impact on you, we may require less documentation.

Any documentation provided by you in connection with your request to correct shall only be used and/or maintained by us for the purpose of correcting your personal information and to comply with the record-keeping obligations under the CCPA regulations.

We will implement and maintain reasonable security procedures and practices in maintaining any documentation relating to your request to correct.

We may delete the contested personal information as an alternative to correction if the deletion does not negatively impact you, or if you consent to the deletion. For example, if deleting instead of correcting inaccurate personal information would make it harder for you to obtain a job, housing, credit, education, or other type of opportunity, we will process the request to correct or obtain your consent to delete the information.

In responding to a request to correct, we will inform you whether or not we have complied with your request. If we deny your request to correct in whole or in part, we will do the following:

1. Explain the basis for the denial, including any conflict with federal or state law, exception to the CCPA, inadequacy in the required documentation, or contention that compliance proves impossible or involves disproportionate effort.
2. If we claim complying with your request to correct would be impossible or would involve disproportionate effort, we will provide you with a detailed explanation that includes enough facts to give you a meaningful understanding as to why we cannot comply with the request. We will not simply state it is impossible or would require disproportionate effort.
3. If we deny your request to correct personal information collected and analyzed concerning your health, you may provide a written statement to be made part of your record per Civil Code section 1798.185, subdivision (a)(8)(D). The written statement is limited to 250 words per alleged inaccurate piece of personal information and you must request the statement be made part of your record. Upon receipt of such a statement, we will include it with your record and make it available to any person with whom we disclose, share, or sell the personal information that is the subject of the request to correct.

If the personal information at issue can be deleted pursuant to a request to delete, you can make a request to delete the personal information. See "How to submit a request," "For all requests, you must provide the following information," and "Requests to delete" above.

We may deny your request to correct if we have denied your same alleged inaccuracy within the past six months of receiving the request. However, we must treat the request to correct as new if you provide new or additional documentation to prove the information at issue is inaccurate.

We may deny a request to correct if we have a good-faith, reasonable, and documented belief a request to correct is fraudulent or abusive. We will inform you we will not comply with the request and will provide an explanation why we believe the request is fraudulent or abusive.

Where we are not the source of the information you contend is inaccurate, in addition to processing your request, we may, but we are not required to, provide the name of the source from which we received the information.

Upon request, we will disclose all the specific pieces of personal information we maintain and have collected about you to allow you to confirm we have corrected the inaccurate information that was the subject of your request to correct. This disclosure will not be considered a response to a request to know that is counted towards the limitation of two requests within a 12-month period as set forth in Civil Code section 1798.130, subdivision (b). With regard to a correction to your Social Security number, driver's license number or other government-issued identification number, financial account number, any health insurance or medical identification number, an account password, security questions and answers, or unique biometric data generated from measurements or technical analysis of human characteristics, we will not disclose this information, but we may provide a way to confirm the personal information we maintain is the same as what you have provided.

The following is a general description of the process we use to verify your identity when submitting a request:

By law and regulation, we are required to positively verify your identity prior to responding to your requests.

- You will need to provide a valid identification card (i.e., a state-issued driver's license, ID card, or US or other government-issued passport) plus the address portion of a utility bill, bank, investment, or credit card statement (number redacted) that contains the name and address that matches your ID and information request.
- If making a request by phone, we may require you to answer specific questions based on information we have or can obtain about you or we may ask you to otherwise verify your identity.
- If you are requesting to know specific pieces of information, a higher degree of verification may be required. We will also require, pursuant to CCPA regulations, that you submit a signed declaration under penalty of perjury that you are the consumer to whom the information relates.
- If we are unable to positively identify the person making the request is the consumer to whom the information relates, we may ask for additional verification or we may deny the request.

If you use an authorized agent to submit a request to know information under CCPA, you must verify your own identity with us and provide the agent written permission to submit the request on your behalf unless the agent holds a valid Power of Attorney or Conservatorship of the Person or the Estate. An agent's failure to provide proof of authorization will result in a denial of the request.

Your right to opt-out and limit use or sharing of your sensitive personal information

The CCPA gives you the right to tell us not to sell or share your personal information with third parties by opting-out of such information sales or sharing. However, the CCPA also states we are not required to provide you with the right to opt-out if we only sell or share your personal information with service providers or contractors pursuant to a written contract meets specific requirements, such as the requirement we only sell or share your personal information to the extent reasonably necessary for the service provider or contractor to carry-out the contracted business purpose and provided the service provider or contractor agrees only to use the information for that purpose. You do not have the right to opt-out because we do not sell or share your personal information outside of an exception that allows us to do so.

In addition, the CCPA gives you the right to limit our use or sharing of sensitive personal information. However, the CCPA also states we are not required to provide you with the right to limit our use or sharing of your sensitive personal information so long as we only share it for the specific purposes set forth in Section 7027(m) of the regulations implementing the California Privacy Rights Act. We are not required to provide you with the right to limit our use or disclosure of your sensitive personal information because we only use or disclose such sensitive personal information for the following purpose(s):

1. To perform the services or provide the goods reasonably expected by an average consumer who requests those goods or services. For example, a consumer's precise geolocation may be used by a mobile application that is providing the consumer with directions on how to get to specific location. A consumer's precise geolocation may not, however, be used by a gaming application where the average consumer would not expect the application to need this piece of sensitive personal information.
2. To prevent, detect, and investigate security incidents that compromise the availability, authenticity, integrity, or confidentiality of stored or transmitted personal information, provided that the use of the consumer's personal information is reasonably necessary and proportionate for this purpose. For example, a business may disclose a consumer's log-in information to a data security company that it has hired to investigate and remediate a data breach that involved that consumer's account.
3. To resist malicious, deceptive, fraudulent, or illegal actions directed at the business and to prosecute those responsible for those actions, provided the use of the consumer's personal information is reasonably necessary and proportionate for this purpose. For example, a business may use information about a consumer's ethnicity and/or the contents of email and text messages to investigate claims of racial discrimination or hate speech.

4. To ensure the physical safety of natural persons, provided the use of the consumer's personal information is reasonably necessary and proportionate for this purpose. For example, a business may disclose a consumer's geolocation to law enforcement for investigation.
5. For short-term, transient use, including, but not limited to, non-personalized advertising shown as part of a consumer's current interaction with the business, provided that the personal information is not disclosed to another third party and is not used to build a profile about the consumer or otherwise alter the consumer's experience outside the current interaction with the business. For example, a business that sells religious books can use information about its customers' interest in its religious content to serve contextual advertising for other kinds of religious merchandise within its store or on its website, so long as the business does not use sensitive personal information to create a profile about an individual consumer or disclose personal information that reveals consumers' religious beliefs to third parties.
6. To perform services on behalf of the business, provided the use of the personal information is reasonably necessary and proportionate for this purpose. For example, a business may use information for maintaining or servicing accounts, providing customer service, processing or fulfilling orders and transactions, verifying customer information, processing payments, providing financing, providing analytic services, providing storage, or providing similar services on behalf of the business.
7. To verify or maintain the quality or safety of a product, service, or device that is owned, manufactured, manufactured for, or controlled by the business, and to improve, upgrade, or enhance the service or device that is owned, manufactured by, manufactured for, or controlled by the business, provided that the use of the consumer's personal information is reasonably necessary and proportionate for this purpose. For example, a car rental business may use a consumer's driver's license for the purpose of testing that its internal text recognition software accurately captures license information used in car rental transactions.
8. For purposes that do not infer characteristics about the consumer. For example, a business that includes a search box on their website by which consumers can search for articles related to their health condition may use the information provided by the consumer for the purpose of providing the search feature without inferring characteristics about the consumer.
